Title: Rubibi news / Rubibi Working Group

Publication info: Broome, W.A. : Kimberley Land Council, 1995-

Physical descrip: v. : ill., maps ; 30 cm.

Abstract: Newsletter of group formed by members of Yawuru, Dugunand Goolarabooloo groups to "speak with 'one voice' on all issues concerning both Native title and Aboriginal heritage". The name Rubibi "refers to an important water place near Kennedy Hill and was a name traditionally used to refer to the Broome area."--from p. 1, no. 1, June 1995.

Annotation: This decision in favour of the Rubibi people holding native title over a traditional Aboriginal law ground near Broome is significant; case "affords a good example of dangers of a court accepting 'historical snapshot' approach to determining cessation of traditional practice"

Title: Law's anthropology : from ethnography to expert testimony in three native title claims

Publication info: 2005

Physical descrip: 345 p. : ill., maps, port

Access: Open access - reading. Partial copying & use. Not for Inter-Library Loan

Annotation: Using three case studies, thesis examines the interaction between Australian anthropologists, lawyers and judges in native title cases; it is a reaction to the oversimplified characterisation of expert testimony as a choice between the role of advocate and independent expert (p. 320); each case study consists of two chapters, the first outlining the relevant anthropological archive and the second outlining how the archive is used to formulate the expert opinion and its reception by the judge; the three case studies are the fact-finding hearing in the original Mabo decision; the Rubibi and the De Rose Hill claims; suggests a robust academic model for the anthropologist is to project expert independence is the skilful triangulation between the anthropological archive, the claimants' evidence and the legal doctrine of native title; considers whether this was done in each of the case studies; examines if and how the fields of anthropology and law have changed

Annotation: "An investigation into the structure of verbal predicates in Bardi, a Nyulnyulan language from the North-Western Australian coast. Examination of possible synchronic analyses and reconstruct the history of the systems between Proto-Nyulnyulan and the modern protested languages. There has been very little previous work on the history of complex predicates, and no detailed historical reconstruction for the Nyulnyulan family. ... an analysis of the structure of verbal predicates in the modern languages, and present reconstructions to show how they have changed over time. ... the first reconstruction of the Proto-Nyulnyulan verbal system and show in detail what changes Bardi has undergone."
